For 25 years, we’ve challenged children in kindergarten through 5th grade from all over the country to write and illustrate an original story. This year we had inspirational stories about snow people, a mysterious magician, a family trying to lower their carbon footprint, a battle of the dips (Salsa vs. Guac) and an adventure under the sea. The NHPBS WRITERS CONTEST has sparked the imaginations of over 16,000 children!

In June, our studios were filled with winners, parents, siblings and grandparents for the NHPBS WRITERS CONTEST awards ceremony, and we took it one step further and streamed the ceremony on Facebook LIVE. Grandparents, aunts and uncles as far away as Seattle, Washington, and even India, were able to celebrate the budding young writers from afar.

Just like these incredible writers and artists, New Hampshire PBS strives to tell the stories of New Hampshire and the world around us. Through full-length programs, immersive experiences and hands-on resources, NHPBS has grown into a digital multi-media service for the Granite State.

So we may engage with our viewers wherever they are, we continue to broaden the ways that we deliver our content: on-air, online, on social media, on YouTube TV, on-demand, in classrooms and in the community.

Our story continues to evolve and grow as we navigate the ever-changing digital landscape. But as we know, any great story starts with an idea, and our idea to serve the public interest and improve the quality of life for everyone in the Granite State will guide us for years to come.

WINDOWS TO THE WILD host Willem Lange and the Chefs on the Rise hikers.

WINDOWS TO THE WILD is generously supported by the Alice J. Reen Charitable Trust, The Fuller Foundation, Inc. and The Gilbert Verney Foundation.
Wearing orange t-shirts and carrying frying pans, spatulas and hiking sticks, participants in the Chefs on the Rise program kicked off the 14th season of WINDOWS TO THE WILD for a cause.

WINDOWS TO THE WILD host Willem Lange joined 25 chefs on a hike to the summit of Mount Major to raise awareness of hunger in the Granite State. Armed with eggs and statistics, the chefs shared that one out of every ten New Hampshire residents is food insecure and doesn’t know where their next meal will come from. “We serve about 12 million meals from our 435 partner agencies each year to families in need,” says New Hampshire Food Bank Executive Director Eileen Groll Liponis.

Liponis and chef Jayson McCarter recruited the chefs to participate in the hike as a way to encourage them to help reduce food insecurity in their communities.

The WINDOWS TO THE WILD crew filmed the chefs cranking up their portable stoves and dishing out gourmet egg-based meals that are offered to patrons from their restaurant menus. The proceeds from the sale of these mountaintop dishes went to the New Hampshire Food Bank.

The WINDOWS TO THE WILD Hiking for Hunger episode won first place for feature story at the 2019 New Hampshire Association of Broadcasters’ Granite Mike Awards.

OUR HOMETOWN: LITTLETON delved into the history of this Grafton County town that sits just north of the notches and has two rivers — the Ammonoosuc and the Connecticut — flowing through it.

New Hampshire author and storyteller Rebecca Rule hosted the show and set the scene, “Littleton is a town that is in the middle of nowhere, yet in the middle of everything.”

Rule explains that Littleton has faced plenty of challenges, “Through perseverance and smart long-term planning, this vibrant town has a bright future.”

OUR HOMETOWN: LITTLETON features stories told by those who live in, love and know their town. Storytellers shared their accounts of how an Olympian was made, one business with a sweet story to tell another business with a bit of spirit, the Uber of the 1800’s and one man’s lasting vision and how the train tracks led him to Littleton.

New Hampshire PBS held an advanced screening of the half-hour show at the Littleton Opera House and showcased snippets from all 45 stories. Community members celebrated their stories and how OUR HOMETOWN: LITTLETON shed light on the town’s past and present.

The NHPBS OUR HOMETOWN series aims to create a historical archive of life in New Hampshire’s towns and cities — one story at a time — from the people who know them best and can be found online at nhpbs.org/hometown.
OUR HOMETOWN: LITTLETON is supported by numerous local businesses, individuals and by Adair Country Inn, Catherine & Joel Bedor, Christine & David Sundman, Littleton Regional Healthcare, Peabody & Smith Realty, Inc.

Additional support provided by David and Nancy Ernsberger, Hunkins & Eaton Insurance Agency, Jeff Gilbert & Stuart Scharff of Littleton Commons, Tender Corporation, Secured Network Services, Inc., Little Village Toy & Book Shop and the Thayers Inn.
Host Jon Cannon celebrates along with Coach Jay Fogarty and the 2019 GSC Champions from Plymouth High School.

GSC is supported by lead sponsor Unitil, with additional funding provided by NEA New Hampshire, Safety Insurance, New Hampshire Lottery, NHHEAF Network Organizations, Heinemann Publishing, Cognia, HRCU and Manchester Community College.
NHPBS CHAMPIONS A NEW HOST

Jon Cannon started on his path to game show host as a high school junior playing for the Belmont High GRANITE STATE CHALLENGE (GSC) team. He recalls seeing Jim Jeannotte, the longtime and much loved host of GSC, and thinking to himself “that’s what I want to do.”

After high school, Cannon attended UNH. While there, he was a work-study student at what was then New Hampshire Public Television and had the opportunity to work as a camera operator and floor director for GSC.

Following graduation, Cannon taught social studies for three years. Then the call came! Jon was selected to join the Jeopardy! Clue Crew, a team of roving correspondents who traveled the world producing video clues for the Jeopardy! show.

Four years, a dozen countries and 25 states later, Cannon returned to his roots in New Hampshire and became a social studies teacher at Bedford High. But he just couldn’t let go of his game show past, so in 2010, he formed the Bedford High GSC team and became the team’s coach.

Cannon is now the third host of GSC since its premiere in 1984. He follows in the footsteps of Tom Bergeron and Jim Jeannotte, who hosted the show from 1985 until his retirement in 2018. He has big shoes to fill, but Cannon is more than up to the challenge.

You can watch all the GRANITE STATE CHALLENGE episodes online at nhpbs.org/gsc.
NHPBS AIMS HIGH ON CONSERVATION

Volunteers make conservation possible. In the New Hampshire PBS production, LIGHTHAWK: DESTINATION CONSERVATION, host Willem Lange meets a group of pilots who volunteer their planes, fuel and time to conservation projects across North America.

In northern New Hampshire, Audubon biologists bushwhack through boreal forests to try and solve the mystery of why rusty blackbirds are dying. LightHawk pilots take to the skies to locate birds that have flown off the radar.

In California’s Pinnacles National Park, LightHawk volunteer pilot Bill Rush helps monitor the health of the endangered California condor population. “Being a volunteer pilot for LightHawk gives me an opportunity to learn a lot about conservation from some of the world’s leading expert scientists,” says Rush.

And in northern Mexico, our cameras fly along with LightHawk pilots to get a birds-eye view of a river delta that’s gone dry. We tell the story of how volunteers work to restore water to the Colorado River Delta where a once-thriving ecosystem is now a desert.

“One thing that’s great about working in conservation is seeing people coming together around a common cause with their own skill set and taking on something that seems insurmountable for one individual to achieve,” says Esther Duke, the Western program director for LightHawk.

LIGHTHAWK: DESTINATION CONSERVATION can be seen online anytime at nhpbs.org/lighthawk.
Support for LIGHTHAWK: DESTINATION CONSERVATION is provided by the Butler Foundation.
Nearly every community deals with the challenges of substance use disorder. The problem might seem unbeatable, but young people throughout New Hampshire are fighting back.

Students armed with knowledge gained from experiences in their own communities show how small changes in behavior, like the proper disposal of unused prescriptions, can lead to big improvements. In the NHPBS production, ROADS TO RECOVERY II, teenagers from all over New Hampshire shared stories of solutions drawing on hope, education and empowerment.

Host Jennifer Rooks led a discussion at Laconia High School exploring the grassroots efforts in New Hampshire with guests from Dover Youth2Youth, students from Laconia High School, Youth Leadership Through Adventure and Makin’ It Happen.

The ROADS TO RECOVERY II website offers resources and stories that can empower teenagers to take the fight against substance misuse into their schools and neighborhoods. For more information go to nhpbs.org/recovery.
