THREE CHEERS FOR VOLUNTEERS!

Over 1,200 items come through the doors of New Hampshire PBS for our annual SPRING AUCTION, and there is one person who receives them all, checks them over and gets them ready to be sold to the lucky high bidder. That person is Russell Manchester.

An enthusiastic math teacher at the Gilbert H. Middle School in Derry, Russell loves being on the front lines of the Auction. "When a donation comes in, it's like Christmas or a birthday. You never know what is going to be in the box. It's very exciting," explains Russell.

This "pre-auction" work begins in January and takes, on average, a few hours a week. "Every donation that comes through the NHPBS doors has a number assigned to it. We've lost very few items in all the years I've been here."

Russell can't recall exactly when he started volunteering, but he knows it has been over 15 years. His stint at NHPBS started when he signed up to answer phones for the fundraising drives. He was then recruited to help out with the SPRING AUCTION, sorting bids and working behind the boards. But it was clear, with his skills and talent, he was destined for greater things.

Russell's been an Auction co-chair twice, and he's the L-Board producer. He takes pride in choosing the eight items that will be presented on the board for each cycle, and his creative genius kicks in to create a display that will show off the items so that viewers at home will call in and bid. "It's like putting together a giant puzzle; it's very satisfying."

There are at least three other board producers jammed into our smaller studio with all of their items and display carts. Throw in a couple of camera operators and a lot of bright lights, and it can seem like utter chaos. But Russell and the other board producers are Auction pros.

Every spring, Russell finds himself wrapping up his teaching day after 2pm and hopping in the car and driving the 50 minutes to Durham to start cataloging the new Auction donations. "We start off slowly in January, but come late March, I'm putting in 30 hours a week to make the SPRING AUCTION a success."

All this hard work will culminate on Saturday April 25th at 7pm when the NHPBS studios will be buzzing with activity and the NHPBS SPRING AUCTION begins by presenting the first item up for bid. We couldn't do it without volunteers like this talented math teacher who methodically makes the NHPBS SPRING AUCTION a success.

If you'd like to be an NHPBS SPRING AUCTION volunteer go to nhpbs.org/auction and sign up today.
