We would probably need a couple of extra fingers to count the number of ways that Ruth-Ellen Mason is involved with New Hampshire PBS. For her, it all began in 1996. "When I first started with New Hampshire PBS, I couldn't afford to give financially, so I donated my time and talent," she said.

Ruth-Ellen answered the call for help with writing copy for the annual Spring Auction. Now, after years of late nights and early mornings, she wholeheartedly calls the Auction volunteers her family. "The NHPBS Auction community is very, very important to me. They are friends, and we've gone to each others' weddings, we've cried at funerals, and we catch up on each others' children," she recalled.

To Ruth-Ellen, New Hampshire PBS is more than just a television station. She's fully engaged in events and programs throughout the year. Her keen attention to detail and welcoming smile has made her a go-to volunteer for several projects.

"Whether I'm proctoring a room full of high school students during the Granite State Challenge Super Sunday event, introducing a new program for the BritWit Club, being a gate keeper at the Passport event or producing the A board for the auction, I know my efforts are valued. And I know that what I'm doing is making a positive impact, not only on the station, but also on the state we love," Ruth-Ellen explains.

Being involved and making lifelong connections has kept Ruth-Ellen engaged and made her one of the biggest fans of NHPBS. Her love of everything British makes her an obvious choice for NHPBS BritWit Club ambassador, a role she has enthusiastically assumed for several years. From learning more about the royal wedding to watching exclusive sneak previews of new BBC programs, the BritWit Club is a fun way to connect with other like-minded Anglophiles.

"We talk about some of our old favorite shows, as well as some of the newer programs like DOWNTON ABBEY and POLDARK, and we learn about the life and culture of those times," she said.

There are plenty of reasons why our volunteers keep coming back for more, and for Ruth-Ellen, it is simple.

"I derive a great deal of satisfaction in volunteering for NHPBS, and I would highly encourage anyone that's even thinking a little bit about becoming a volunteer to just give it a try. You will find something that you can do that will make you feel good about contributing to the health of New Hampshire PBS," she said.
